Accountability Office, 2011 OCLC Number: (OCoLC)696604435 Subject: Electric utilities -- United States -- Evaluation. Excerpt: . . . approve cost recovery for electric investments. With respect to smart grid initiatives, individual utilities can choose to invest in smart grid devices on their own. However, as noted above, depending on the type of utility and where cost recovery is sought, either FERC, the state PUC, or another entity will have authority for deciding whether to allow that utility to recover the costs of smart grid investments from customers. State and federal authorities also play key roles with respect to reliability, which can be affected by a systems cybersecurity. State regulators generally have authority to oversee the reliability of the local distribution system. The North American Electric Reliability Corporation ( NERC ) is the federally designated U. S. Electric Reliability Organization overseen by FERC. NERC has responsibility for conducting reliability assessments and enforcing mandatory standards to ensure the reliability of the bulk power system - a term that refers to facilities and control systems necessary for operating the electric transmission network and certain generation facilities needed for reliability. NERC develops reliability standards collaboratively through a deliberative process involving utilities and others 9 in the electricity industry - which are then sent to FERC for approval. These reliability standards include critical infrastructure protection standards for protecting electric utility-critical and cyber-critical assets. In 2008, FERC approved eight critical infrastructure standards developed by NERC. These standards established requirements to help ensure the secure electronic exchange of information needed to operate and support the reliability of the bulk power system, and to help prevent unauthorized physical or electronic access to critical cyber assets....
