Not illustrated. 1916 Excerpt: .doubting the necessity for efficient school medical inspection, and more particularly, the establishment of eye clinics in the public school system, will find much food for thought in the report of the Bureau of Child Hygiene covering school medical inspection in New York City during 1919. This report, prepared by the Director, Dr. S. Josephine Baker, and the Assistant Director, Dr. Jacob Sobel, may be found in the September issue of the Monthly Bulletin of the Department of Health, New York City. Contagious eye and skin diseases are grouped under one heading, showing 237,437 cases; of these, 1,675 are cases of trachoma, 12,457 cases of acute conjunctivitis, and 128 cases of follicular conjunctivitis. Of 248,978 children examined, 17,895 were found to be suffering from defects in vision, of which 8,787 were corrected by proper refraction and glasses. The report goes on to state: The Blind and Sight Conservation work is continuing to grow in importance and results. We now have 699 active cases under supervision and treatment at the Sight Conservation Clinic. 1,114 cases with vision of 20/50 or worse have been sent to us as candidates, of which 639 have been terminated cured, and 475 while still under treatment, have improved to such an extent that they have been assigned to normal classes. Of those cases in the sight conservation classes, 33 have been terminated cured, and 34 though still under treatment, have so improved that they have been re-assigned to the normal classes. There...
