Two visits are advantageous if not too difficult--one arranged, and the second casual and unannounced. BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS. General plan.--The buildings are arranged with studied carelessness, giving a very pleasing and home-like look. Adaptability to work.--This has been clearly demonstrated, especially in the case of Rockefeller Hall, a building the exterior of which bears a resemblance to cold, rare roast beef. Interior decoration.--This varies, and many artistic effects are produced. The climax has been reached in the case of the parlor of Davison House, where a unique mingling of magenta and purple bids the rash gazer wipe her eye. Heating.--The buildings are heated by steam-pipes which rouse the inmates at six A. M. sharp, thus giving them time...
