Excerpt: . . . this great wickedness, and sin against God So, now in his prison life, Gods love comforted him, and his voice was as plainly heard within those gloomy walls as on the soft hill-side of his beloved Hebron, for God never forsakes his faithful children. Just notice the words, The Lord was with him, and you will understand the reason of his joy. If God be with us there can be no real sorrow. The very jailer looked with favour on the patient Hebrew youth. His religion was one of practice and not of profession only, and, seeing that he might trust him, the jailer gave him all the prisoners in charge, and set him in a place of great confidence and authority, and why because again it says, The Lord was with him, and that which he did the Lord made it to prosper. Josephs prison life was thus a useful and happy one. When the butler and the baker of Pharaoh were cast into prison, and placed beneath his care, he was as kind and tender to them as he would have been to brothers, and seeing them sad one morning, he asked them the cause, and they told him it was on account of a dream which they had each had. The butler told his first, and Joseph telling them that interpretations belonged to God alone, and, taking no credit to himself, explained its meaning, and promised that in three days more he...
